Pastor Speaks

Pastor Says—

PARACHUTE PRAYING is seeking to hammer down the gates of heaven in an emergency. This kind of praying certainly is not in keeping with the scriptures. Nor is it in the right attitude toward God. It is an insult to God, as well as an injury to the one who exercises this kind of prayer. This is not to say, however, that God will not answer "emergency" prayers, but this kind of praying does not allow for the friendship of God. "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, you shall ask what you will and it will be done unto you" John. 15:9.

There are many effects of "abiding" and surely one of them is friendship of God. To be sure God does not answer prayer on the basis of friendship alone, but this is one aspect of the answer so far as we are concerned. I had rather do business with a friend than a stranger, though I can do business with both.

A parachute has no use except in emergency. It is good to have these protections in emergencies, but suppose all the equipment of the soldier was just emergency equipment. There would be no time nor equipment for being a regular soldier.

How would you feel if your children only came to you when there was an emergency? Would you not be grieved and concerned that they had only this level of concern for their life? Think how our Heavenly Father must "feel" about us! But thanks to God he does not "feel" like us on these matters. Of course we can come to him at anytime. My plea is that we pray often, stay in contact with him daily. Not only will we fair better in the emergencies of life, but serve him with more purpose day by day. We will have a larger sense of mission.

Find your place in God's house this Sunday in prayer and worship. It seems that a lady came to church late on Sunday morning. She inquired of the usher if the services were over. The wise usher replied, "No madame, the worship is just about concluded, but the services are just beginning."

Where Are You?

Lesson for July 21, 1963

The Bible might very well begin with an essay on sin; but it does not. It begins with two stories, one of Creation and the next of Sin. Stories, not essays, make up most of the Bible, and this is a good thing. What Christian students of the Bible have been discovering in their re-study of these ancient stories is that the point is: THIS MEANS YOU! The name Adam means Man, and the name Eve means Life. There is something very suggestive about this. Anyway, if we think of these stories as only legends out of the dim past, just stories to tell around campfire and hearth, we misjudge them. If we come close when all this was, and should we take these stories literally or as parables, we are still of the beam. What we need to do is take the stories to heart.

Anatomy of Sin

One great thinker in the Christian church has said, Everyman's middle name is Adam. What he meant was, the story of Adam is the story of every man. The story of Adam's sin is the story of Every-man's sin. The cause, the course, the cruelty, the consequences, and the cure of sin are all here. But the central fact about sin, the really dreadful thing about it, is brought out by that fateful question in the God who questions must be answered.

Where are you? God asks. Now it is not hard to see that this question was not asked out of God's ignorance. God knew very well where Adams was, he knows where we all are. God asks the question to make Adam think: he had lost contact with God. God should not have had to look for him. He should have run joyfully to meet the God who had done him good and not evil. Instead, he is in hiding, friendless, useless and afraid.

Sin Cuts Us Off

That is essentially what sin is: being cut off. Adam was now separated from his Maker, out of harmony with him. He had given up trying to do what God wanted him to do. God's interests are no longer his interests. The likeness to God (about which we were thinking a week ago) is beginning to grow dim, so that not long after that—and right on up to now—there are descendants of the first man who look so cruel and are so wicked that any one in his right mind would say, If that's the image of God, I don't want any part of it. Adam was cut off in other words not only from God but from himself, his best self. Further, he was cut off from his wife. The story of Genesis tells of the joyful words of welcome when Adam sees Eve for the first time. Paradise, for both of them, is complete only when the other one, the loved one, is there to share it. Now all is changed. Adams only word about his wife is—"The woman Thou gavest me, she gave me the fruit". It's all God's fault for sending Eve, or it's all Eve's fault for tempting him, it couldn't be his own fault, oh no! When you get to the point where you won't take responsibility for your own acts, when you blame everyone but yourself for your sins and your troubles, then you have really broken off relations with the human race.

The Solemn Question

The first question God asks of man rings like a solemn warning bell in the heart of every one some time or other. Where are you? You are here now, at this moment; but you are wherever you act, you are wherever things happen — or fail to happen — because of them. Somehow, perhaps it might have believed in God if it had not been for you. You are there in that person's despairing cynical mind. Where are you? Results of what you say, what you do never stop with the saying and doing. Like stones thrown into a pond they create ripples that spread to distant shores. If an old man could realize all the evil that he caused during his lifetime, the burden of it would be overpowering. Yet there is another and a happier side. God's question, Where are you? reminds us that God does care what we do. He does not easily give up. He seeks men in their dark hiding places. If He demands obedience and punishes suffering, and He does, it is a sign of hope; for it shows that God takes human lives seriously: He is not content to let men go.
